IMPORTANT - WE NEED HELP

Our Treasurer for the last eight years has been Ron Callaway, who has now resigned from this position, and no-one else on our hard-working committee is able to take on this job. Ron is continuing for the moment, but we really need a new treasurer.

It would be useful to have someone who could come in on Thursdays, when we open for public requests/research, but if that is not possible, we can organize other times until the new treasurer knows the ropes.

PLEASE, we really need someone to do this necessary work.

And remember too, we are always looking for contributions to the Journal, as well as additions to the Society's archives.

PRESIDENT'S REPORT – Gail Hanger

The last year has certainly gone with speed, or so it seems. We are only small band and have been unable to do everything we would like.

The Society has been able to again put on displays around the Shire and while it involves a lot of work, they continue to receive good feedback. We have even received offers of information and photos as a result.

Our room upstairs at the Library has been kept very busy with people doing research, and we have had lots of research enquiries lately. Several were from different branches of the same family. We have received wonderful feedback from the researchers.

The update of the Bargo Cemetery has been put on hold as I battle health issues and work responsibilities. Several of our members have also been unwell, and we wish them all a speedy recovery. The past twelve months have seen the deaths of several current and past members, and we offer our sympathy to their families and friends.

I would like to thank everybody who has helped with the continuing running of the Society, to which each of us in our own way bring expertise and experience to help each other and visitors looking for information.

I would like to welcome all our new members who have joined throughout the year, and wish them well with their research.

It is hoped that the next twelve months will bring good news for everyone.

LIBRARIAN'S REPORT – Helen Hanger

Once again another year has passed and we enter another year, researching and collecting material to stock our resource base. We have had a busy year with plenty of written enquiries, as well as lots of visitors at some times of the year. Our loyal band of volunteers are wonderful and very helpful – many thanks to all,

Our displays during this year were one in History Week, September 2007, with the Library, and the other on Australia Day 2008. We have cut down a little because of the lack of helpers. We, along with other local societies, have been asked to help the Library with information on their website. After initial discussions, this may concentrate on a brief explanation of the names of towns and localities in the Shire though we still hope to put out a more detailed booklet on the same subject.

We are de-accessioning some of our general library to make more room, and allow us to concentrate on local history publications. Thanks to Elaine for her hard work on this project. We are hoping to have our Bargo Cemetery transcript put together very soon.

Gail was our delegate again at the Family History Conference held at Casino. We were made very welcome and learnt quite lot as well as enjoying ourselves, despite being caught in a very bad storm.

We had a very nice Christmas meeting at the home of Elaine and Ron Callaway, for which we thank them – and guess what, it's almost Christmas time again!

I hope you all enjoy another year working with us at the Library, many thanks for all your support.

Continuing the Recollections of Bargo, by Ted Brodie

Many apologies for the lapse of editorial rigor in the first part of these recollections. Page 8 should have started with:

Across the railway line as it is today was the Bargo Mission Hall, a wooden building with a 400 gallon square tank. The hall was usually occupied by the Anglican congregation on Sundays and they had an organ and a library and a thriving Sunday school.

To continue, in what is mostly now within the town of Bargo; not many of the names coincide with those on the parish map (p. 4 of last Journal). However, Ted Brodie and Bruce Knox put together a list of original land owners and the later owners. So block 46, originally owned by William Scott was later Woolcott's Cooneroo; no. 47 was James Vaughan's land, later the site of the Gold-digger's Arms, and then Dymond's property; they later owned block 48. No. 50 is now the hotel site and commercial area mentioned by Ted. The Hambridge's owned several blocks, including 108, 109 and 51 (the school site) while on the west side of the railway line, no. 59 was now George Wilkinson's land.

As you went up Wellers' Road past Barbour's you came to our house. The original house was burned down in 1936. Further on, on the corner was Taylor's and at the end of the road was Campbell's house, later Weller's, from whose place the road took its name.

Coming back to the main road and turning south we come to Hogan's on the right-hand side. The grandson of Daniel Hogan lives there now. On the other side of the road was Woolcott's property. Further south on the right-hand side was Moore's house and on the left was an old stone house where Shiel's lived before it was demolished. This was the old "Gold-digger's Arms" conducted by Mr. Anderson in the old days. There was a very deep well near the house and it was filled in when Arthur Rickard & Co. subdivided the property during the First World War.

On the opposite side of the road (the western side) was the old St. Paul's church from Cowper Street, Upper Picton. It was a wooden affair, built in 1884 at Picton and shifted to Bargo by bullock waggon in sections in 1913 to replace the burned down Mission Hall. This church was badly damaged by gales on a couple of occasions and is now a private residence, a new St. Paul's being built near Bargo Post Office.

Next was Dymond's on the left (they gave the ground on which old St Paul's was erected) demolished when the estate was cut up soon after the railway line was opened [in 1919]. Opposite, on top of the rise was George Wilkinson's farm. He was a dairy-farmer and cattle dealer. Behind Wilkinson's on the banks of Horne's Creek was Matthews' place. The first Methodist church services were conducted in a fern-house in Matthews' garden. I believe that church services were celebrated under a big tree in Juleff's place at one time.

The properties on the right of Dymond's house were vacant ... Behind were Pardie's and Bennetts. Bill Bennett became an expert on native plants and was afterwards employed at Sydney botanical gardens. On the left past Dymond's was the remining portion of Badgery's estate. A Mr. Lyons lived there and later on Mr. Bennett lived there when the estate was cut up. I believe the property was owned by the Johnston family of Sydney. The present Bargo school is on this estate, as is the hotel, Pickard's two shops and others nearer to the post office. Opposite the Bargo school lived the Wilkinson family who had the post office. Further south, opposite Johnston road, Teddy Mitchell did some bootmaking in an old slab hut.

On the Arina road was Hambridge's and on the left, further on, Harding's [see Parish Map]. Across from Harding's lived the Crook family. Mrs. Crook and her three daughters ran the place. I believe Mr. Crook was a medical man. Further along was Carter's on the right and Hicks' on the left, then you come to Arina school, opposite the stone house where we started.

I have taken the route that Pickard's van used to take when it ran from Pickard's main shop at Thirlmere. At one time Mr. Pickard had seven shops in the district. The first delivery man that I can remember was a Mr. Donovan; later on Mr. Whitford drove it until Pickard opened a shop in Bargo. Mr. Whitford was usually called "Dooley" as he called himself when he first called on Mrs. Austin of Pheasant's Nest. She had an Irish accent, and she asked his name, he said jokingly, "Dooley, to be sure" and the name stuck.

The van would carry everything, meat, papers, and groceries etc., but not the mail, though customers used to send notes to neighbours. The mail was brought up from Picton three times a week; the service was later extended to Arina road and thence back to the main road via the Pot Holes.

I can't remember seeing any koalas around Bargo in my youth, but there were plenty of platypuses in the dam built on the Bargo river for the Picton water supply, and a number of wombats were to be found on the sandy soil round Thirlmere Lakes.

Below, William Holden's shop was next to the hotel in the 1920s

Norman Carter District Pioneer dies at 64 years.

The death on Tuesday last week of Mr. Harold Norman Carter marks the passing of a highly respected citizen and a member of a pioneering family who have been linked with the district for more than 100 years.

Mr. Carter died at Camden District Hospital at the age of 64 years following an illness lasting about ten weeks. Born at Bargo, he was a most likeable character, with a quiet disposition, ever helpful and honest but always remained one of nature's gentlemen.

This had won for him the greatest respect of all who came to know him over the years of his life in the district. Both his parents and grandparents were pioneers of the Bargo district dating back more than 100 years and like them, Norman Carter was a hardworking farmer. He married Nellie Paine in 1930 and in 1935 they went into partnership with his wife's parents in conducting Wattle Farm guest house at Bargo. The Paine family including Mrs. Carter's mother and her sister Mrs. R. Murphy, now of Needlecraft Store Picton, had conducted the guest house since 1916.

Mr. and Mrs. Carter remained in partnership at Wattle Farm until 1951, when they occupied an attractive sandstone house built in Arina Road Bargo, at present occupied by Mr. & Mrs. E.M. Curr. The guest house was destroyed by fire. In 1956 Mr. & Mrs. Carter moved to Picton, taking up residence in Antill Street. Mr. Carter interested himself in the estate agency business for about three years.

Perhaps Mr. Carter's greatest contribution to the community at Bargo in later years of residence there was his service to the Bushfire Brigade of which he was an astute and very able captain for many years. His wife and one brother Mr. Dick Carter of Mittagong survive. Two brothers, Charles and Arthur and one sister Miss Mildred May Carter predeceased him.

Miss Mildred Carter, who died on April 17th 1961 at the age of 64 years had been residing at Punchbowl since leaving Picton about nine years ago. She had spent most of her life in Bargo.

A number of local citizens attended the funeral of Norman Carter, which left St. Phillips Church, Macquarie Road, Auburn after a service last Thursday afternoon for the Crematorium, Rookwood. The sympathy of all district friends will go to Mrs. Carter in her sad loss and the passing of an esteemed citizen.

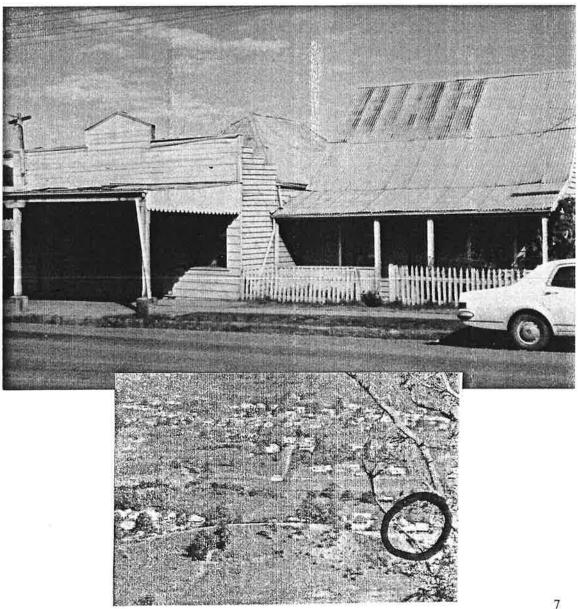

Harold Norman Carter was born in 1896, his parents being Richard and Christine (nee Dietrich), and his grandparents were Richard Carter and Elizabeth (Moran). The latter were living in Campbelltown, where their 9 children were born, but they may have moved to Bargo in the 1860s. Richard junior and Christine were certainly in the district by 1871, when Richard had a Conditional Purchase block in Pheasant's Nest.

Does anyone know anything about the Wattle Farm guest house?

Recent Society activities

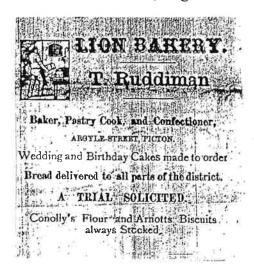

We tried our hand at bookselling, using some of the general history and general interest books that Elaine Callaway had spent most of six months de-accessioning. and that we no longer have room for. We asked if we could set up a table at the Library Book sale in September, hoping we might benefit from the many people who look forward to this b-annual event. We did raise our profile as the queue extended past our table, but only sold a few volumes; we may have to think more carefully about which books might be more appropriate for these occasions.

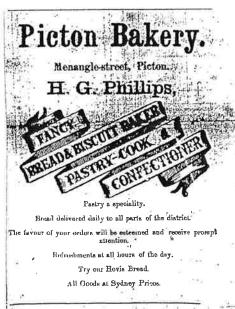

However, one of the advantages was being able to chat to some of the passing crowd, one of whom was Mrs. Lowe, who is part of the Lowe bakery family. She has now given us a copy of a photograph taken c.1973, of the old bakery and house, now replaced by the block of flats at 77 Menangle Street. The Lowe's had bought this in the 1930s, but it is possible that it was the same bakery owned and operated by William Trenerry from c. 1860 until 1890 when it was taken over by W.H. Barlow. While all the connections have yet to be made, the roof line of the house certainly suggests a 19th century style. Our photograph collection has a few gaps along Menangle Street, but a 1969 photo taken from Vault Hill shows what appears to be the two abutting buildings, with Wendover House just along the street (see below).

When Mr. Trenerry sold his business in 1890, this Notice appeared in the Picton Argus of April 2nd: "Having this day handed over my bakery business to Mr. W.H. Barlow, I beg to return my sincere thanks for the liberal patronage which I have received for the past 30 years and trust the same will extend to my successor". Even more interesting is the suggestion, in Mr. Trenerry's obituary (Picton Advocate, September 11, 1896) that he took over the bakery business, suggesting that the buildings could be even older. So more research to be done. Although Mrs Margaret Brown, who came to Picton as a young bride in 1916, remembers that several bakers operated from what became the Lowe bakery, it is not certain if the H.G. Phillips of the advertisement below was one of them. Mr. Ruddiman's Lion Bakery was opened in 1900 at 109 Argyle Street, but according to Jan Ross in an article for the Picton News, September 29,1993 the Ruddiman bakery was taken over by the Lowe family, who operated there from the mid 1930s until 1973. So they seem to have been at the Menangle Street bakery for only a few years.

The Picton Post, August 12 1908:

The Picton Chamber of Commerce are starting different types of markets on Sundays. Some will cover produce and plants, with those on the third or fourth Sunday being more appropriate for our possible inclusion. It was decided at the last monthly meeting that we would try to check out the markets, and make a decision next year.

Please note that however helpful it is to raise our profile, we only have a few active members, and can only do so much. Can anyone else give us a hand?

We have reduced the number of days that we contribute a display and sale of publications to only one regular event, Australia Day. The Society does have quite a collection of display material from past years, which can be re-used in a variety of ways, plus our current and future publications, and possibly some of our photographs. Th new market will be quite small, as it will be next to the Old Post Office/Visitor Information Centre, but we would appreciate some more help.

On a more cheerful note, the Publications subcommittee has almost completed the revision of the

Illustrated and with some additional convict names of

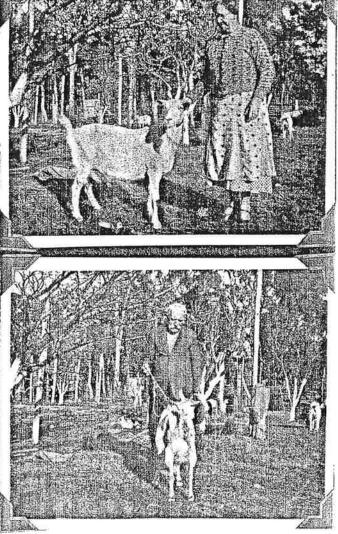

Along the Menangle Road by Ken Williams.

This version is in A4 format, and everyone has been pleased to see what a professional appearance has been achieved. The book is now going through its final proof reading (thank you Laurie and Tina, for providing the fresh eyes needed). It has taken a long time, but we've begun on a rewrite of several of the old Chronicles to fit into one volume, with some new material. By putting the Chronicles into one volume we can spend more time, or money, on presenting a better publication. Gail continues to work on the Bargo cemetery, but it is hard work when working full time, and we're still struggling to get used to some aspects of computer technology (well, some of us are worse than others.)

Recent Acquisitions

As well as the photograph of the Lowe house and bakery, we are fortunate to have been given some material by Clare Bell of Bargo, who has lived in the area all her life. Her grandfather, Samuel Emmett moved to Tahmoor when the new railway line was built (1915-1919), bought land there and developed what is now the centre of Tahmoor. Clare has donated a photo album dating to the 1930s or 1940s of Sam and his second wife Ethel (Doust) along with their goats, dogs and some views of their house, now replaced by the BiLo supermarket. Sam died in 1949.
